

From Assumed Compliance to Provable Risk Transfer

Risk Has Entered a New Era

More third parties. More scrutiny. Higher legal and financial stakes.

In Today's Environment,

Risk Transfer Either Holds – or It Doesn't

When Risk Transfer Breaks Down

- Assumed compliance
- Point-in-time verification
- Gaps discovered after incidents

When Risk Transfer Holds Up

- Requirements enforced consistently
- Coverage verified continuously
- Defensible outcomes under pressure

Lawsuits Are Becoming

More Frequent and More Severe

“Nuclear verdicts... surpassed $10 million.”

“Florida... responsible for half of all nuclear verdicts.”

“Vendor relationships present significant risks to business.”

Most understand...

Contracts Protect You Legally. Insurance Protects You Financially.

Unfortunately...

Manual Insurance Tracking Wasn't Built for Today's Risk

- ✘ Coverage changes mid-term
- ✘ Expired or insufficient limits go unnoticed
- ✘ Gaps surface after incidents occur

But...

There is A World Where Risk Transfer Is Provable, Not Assumed

Imagine...

- Real-time visibility into third-party compliance
- Issues identified before incidents occur
- Faster, more defensible claims response

Well... there is a solution

- Continuous insurance verification
- Automated enforcement of requirements
- Centralized documentation for audits and claims
